The Improved Rifleman's Rule is used to estimate the change in elevation correction due to angular fire. It is generally not precise enough for first round hits outside of a few hundred yards.

To use the Dope Disc to calculate the Rifleman's Rule turn the disc so that the indicator line falls on the flat range elevation correction for your chosen range. Read the scale that corresponds to the firing angle that you want to correct for.